At a meeting of workers and industrial physicians held recently in Wroclaw, sanitary conditions in plants and care of working mothers were discussed. Reports of activities were made by committees established to care for sick workers. Members of these committees visit the homes, study living conditions, and give free assistance and financial aid, if necessary, in the form of loans. Attention was called to the frequent occurrences of simulated illness which hamper production and delay completion of plans. A resolution was passed to choose responsible committees in every plant to cooperate with the physicians in protecting the health of the workers and taking care of the sick.

Similar meetings were held in Jelenia Gora, Klodzko, and Legnica.
